We inform you that unless a cookie is not marked as essential, your consent is required to use such a cookie. We inform you that our website may use technologies, subject to your consent, that allow "cross-device" tracking, i.e., the possibility of analyzing your website activities. You allow "crossdevice tracking," i.e. (allow the analysis of a user's activities on different devices) if you give your consent to use analytical and advertising cookies. In these cases, the website may use Google Consent Mode to get an analytical picture of visitors' browsing activity and help improve the performance of analytical methods; this method is strictly necessary to maintain the website. These collected data are anonym and aggregated, so visitors shall not be identified, and anonymous aggregated databases shall not be attempted by reversing. Aggregated anonym data is sent to Google Ireland; related to the data processing activity of Google, please visit the following site.

Duration of cookies

The cookies can be qualified by their duration time.

This website may send temporary and permanent cookies to your device as well. Regarding the temporary cookies, we inform you of the duration of such cookies. Temporary cookies usually last until you close your internet browser. When you end your browser session, such cookies expire. Permanent cookies have a set expiry date, and they remain on your device until so far, the website can read these persistent cookies from your device, whereby access to our website becomes more accessible and faster.

IP addresses

IP addresses (Internet Protocol addresses) are unique numerical labels used between computers for communication to identify each other. Each computer connected to the Internet has an IP address. IP addresses serve two main functions: network interface identification and location addressing. We inform you that particular cookies may collect masked data about your IP address, however, we cannot identify any user based on these data. An IP address is deemed as personal data. Visit this article on Wikipedia to understand better IP addresses.

Data transfer regarding cookies

Data only may be transferred outside the European Economic Area if necessary for the website's operation. In these cases, the recipients shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter V of the GDPR.
